

Praxeme in a Wiki

The Praxeme Institute web site has been completely modified. It is now a wiki which gives us the ability to show the rigorous structure of the corpus: the Organum, and all the access paths we need. The main structure is shown on the left of all pages, in a classical left-hand navigation menu with all first level topics.

See updated links below to start digging around the new structure.

New partnerships

SEMIC.EU

"SEMIC.EU is a participatory platform and a service by the European Commission that supports the sharing of assets of interoperability to be used in public administration and eGovernment "

SEMIC.EU has published some works from the Praxeme Institute:

- Models
- Methodological documents

The Praxeme Institute is now recognized by SEMIC.EU

as a partner: <http://www.semic.eu/semic/view/partner/PartnerSingleView.xhtml?id=334>

C.E.S.A.M.E.S.

The Center of Excellence for Architecture, Management and Economy of the Systems is a non-profit organization focused on increasing awareness about methodologies and tools for system architectures. It targets key industry actors to help them cope with speed and to carry out technological projects in risky environments.

CESAMES and the Praxeme Institute share numerous points of interest. They also share a core of fundamental values and converge in defending a certain rationality. These facts have led them to sign and promote the Enterprise Transformation Manifesto: <http://www.enterprisetransformationmanifesto.org>.

The two organizations have decided to join forces and have established a partnership agreement, a framework through which common actions will be organized.
